Sales Force Automation

MCS CRM guides your sales teams through a streamlined, defined sales process to successfully close the deal. To give three examples of how your sales processes will be optimised:

• A streamlined quotation process

With 'Quick Quote' (figure 2), you rapidly capture information from your contacts, whether the in-coming enquiry relates to product lines, hire or sales of equipment or basic pricing. Using your own customised templates, you can convert an existing quotation to a contract, ready for your hire desk to pick up directly in MCS-rm via the Daily Diary or the Contract status page.

• Manage your leads

With a unique 'Opportunity' page, you can create, amend or overwrite a quotation and send it to a designated contact via your preferred delivery method.

• Tasks and Actions

Automate and manage all your sales activities and tasks. Define your tasks, link them to relevant actions and assign them to a specific contact, along with reminder notifications and due dates and track these tasks and actions against a specific company or individual contact. You can then escalate and report on outstanding tasks to ensure that prospect commitments are not overlooked and tasks are completed.

Targeted, effective marketing campaigns

The MCS CRM marketing campaign management tool (figure 3) maximises sales opportunities. You can target personalised messages at specific groups – prospects or existing customers - to reflect their interests and buying history. MCS CRM stores commonly-used template letters and mailshots, to save time and help you build on best practice. Mailshots are easily created by sorting and merging different data sources.

Improved reporting

You can extract vital sales reports, such as the total number of sales enquiries across all depots or sales conversions over a set time period and gain instant detailed information on the ratio of enquiries to conversions which helps identify best performing products, depots and individuals.
